THE DRAGON

Cornwall Central High School
Cornwall New York
Volume X

Flashing paddles
silently cut through the waters
as an Indian canoe approached the inlet where Henry Hudson's Half Moon
had anchored,
pausing in its voyage of exploration.
"Fulton Folly", the Clermont, stopped here
on her history-making trip.
Our harbor was also an anchorage
for the queen of the river liners, the lovely Mary Powell.
It was during her era
that Cornwall grew as a recreational spot,
a mooring, so to speak,
for philosophers, scientists,
poets, musicians, and scholars.
Here they found beauty and refuge amid the majestic highlands.

Whether it is a whaler
home from a three-year journey
or a modern barge
bound for New York,
an eighteenth century sailboat
or a twentieth century water-skier, the river has answered Cornwall's call for pleasure and profit.
The school is an independent community
like a ship afloat.
Navigation for a steady course demands constant awareness of conditions, currents, and depths.
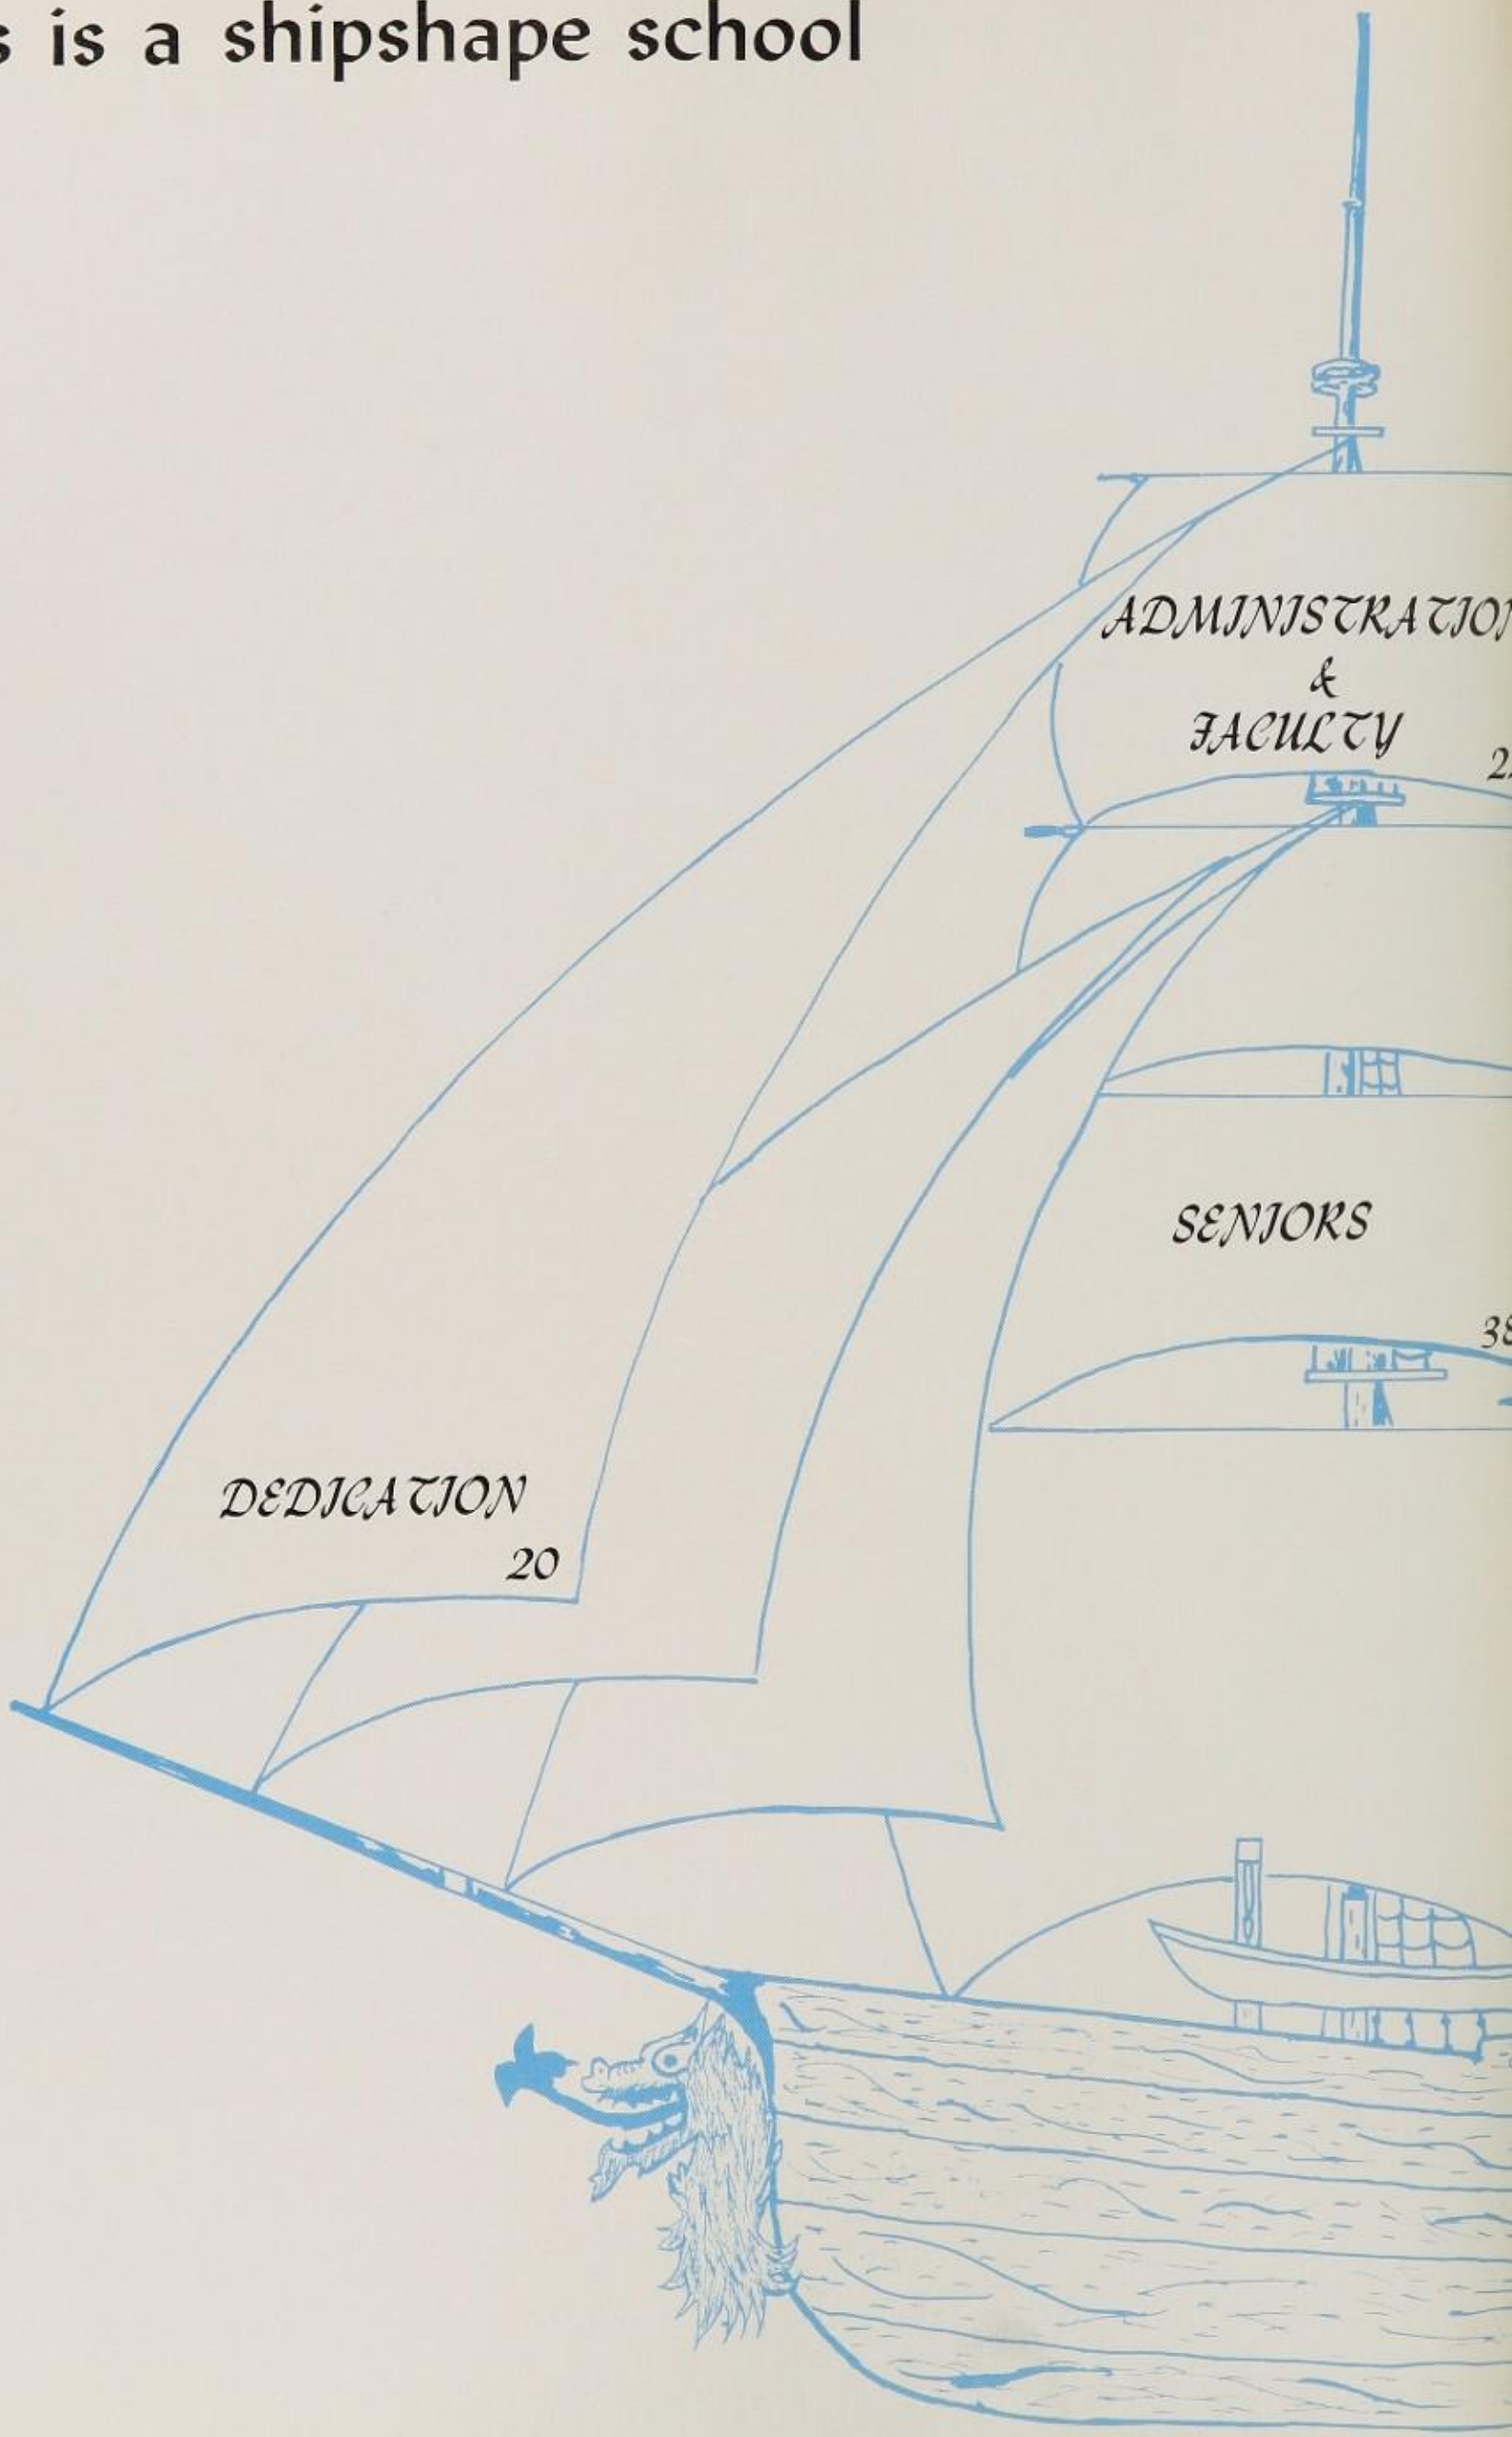
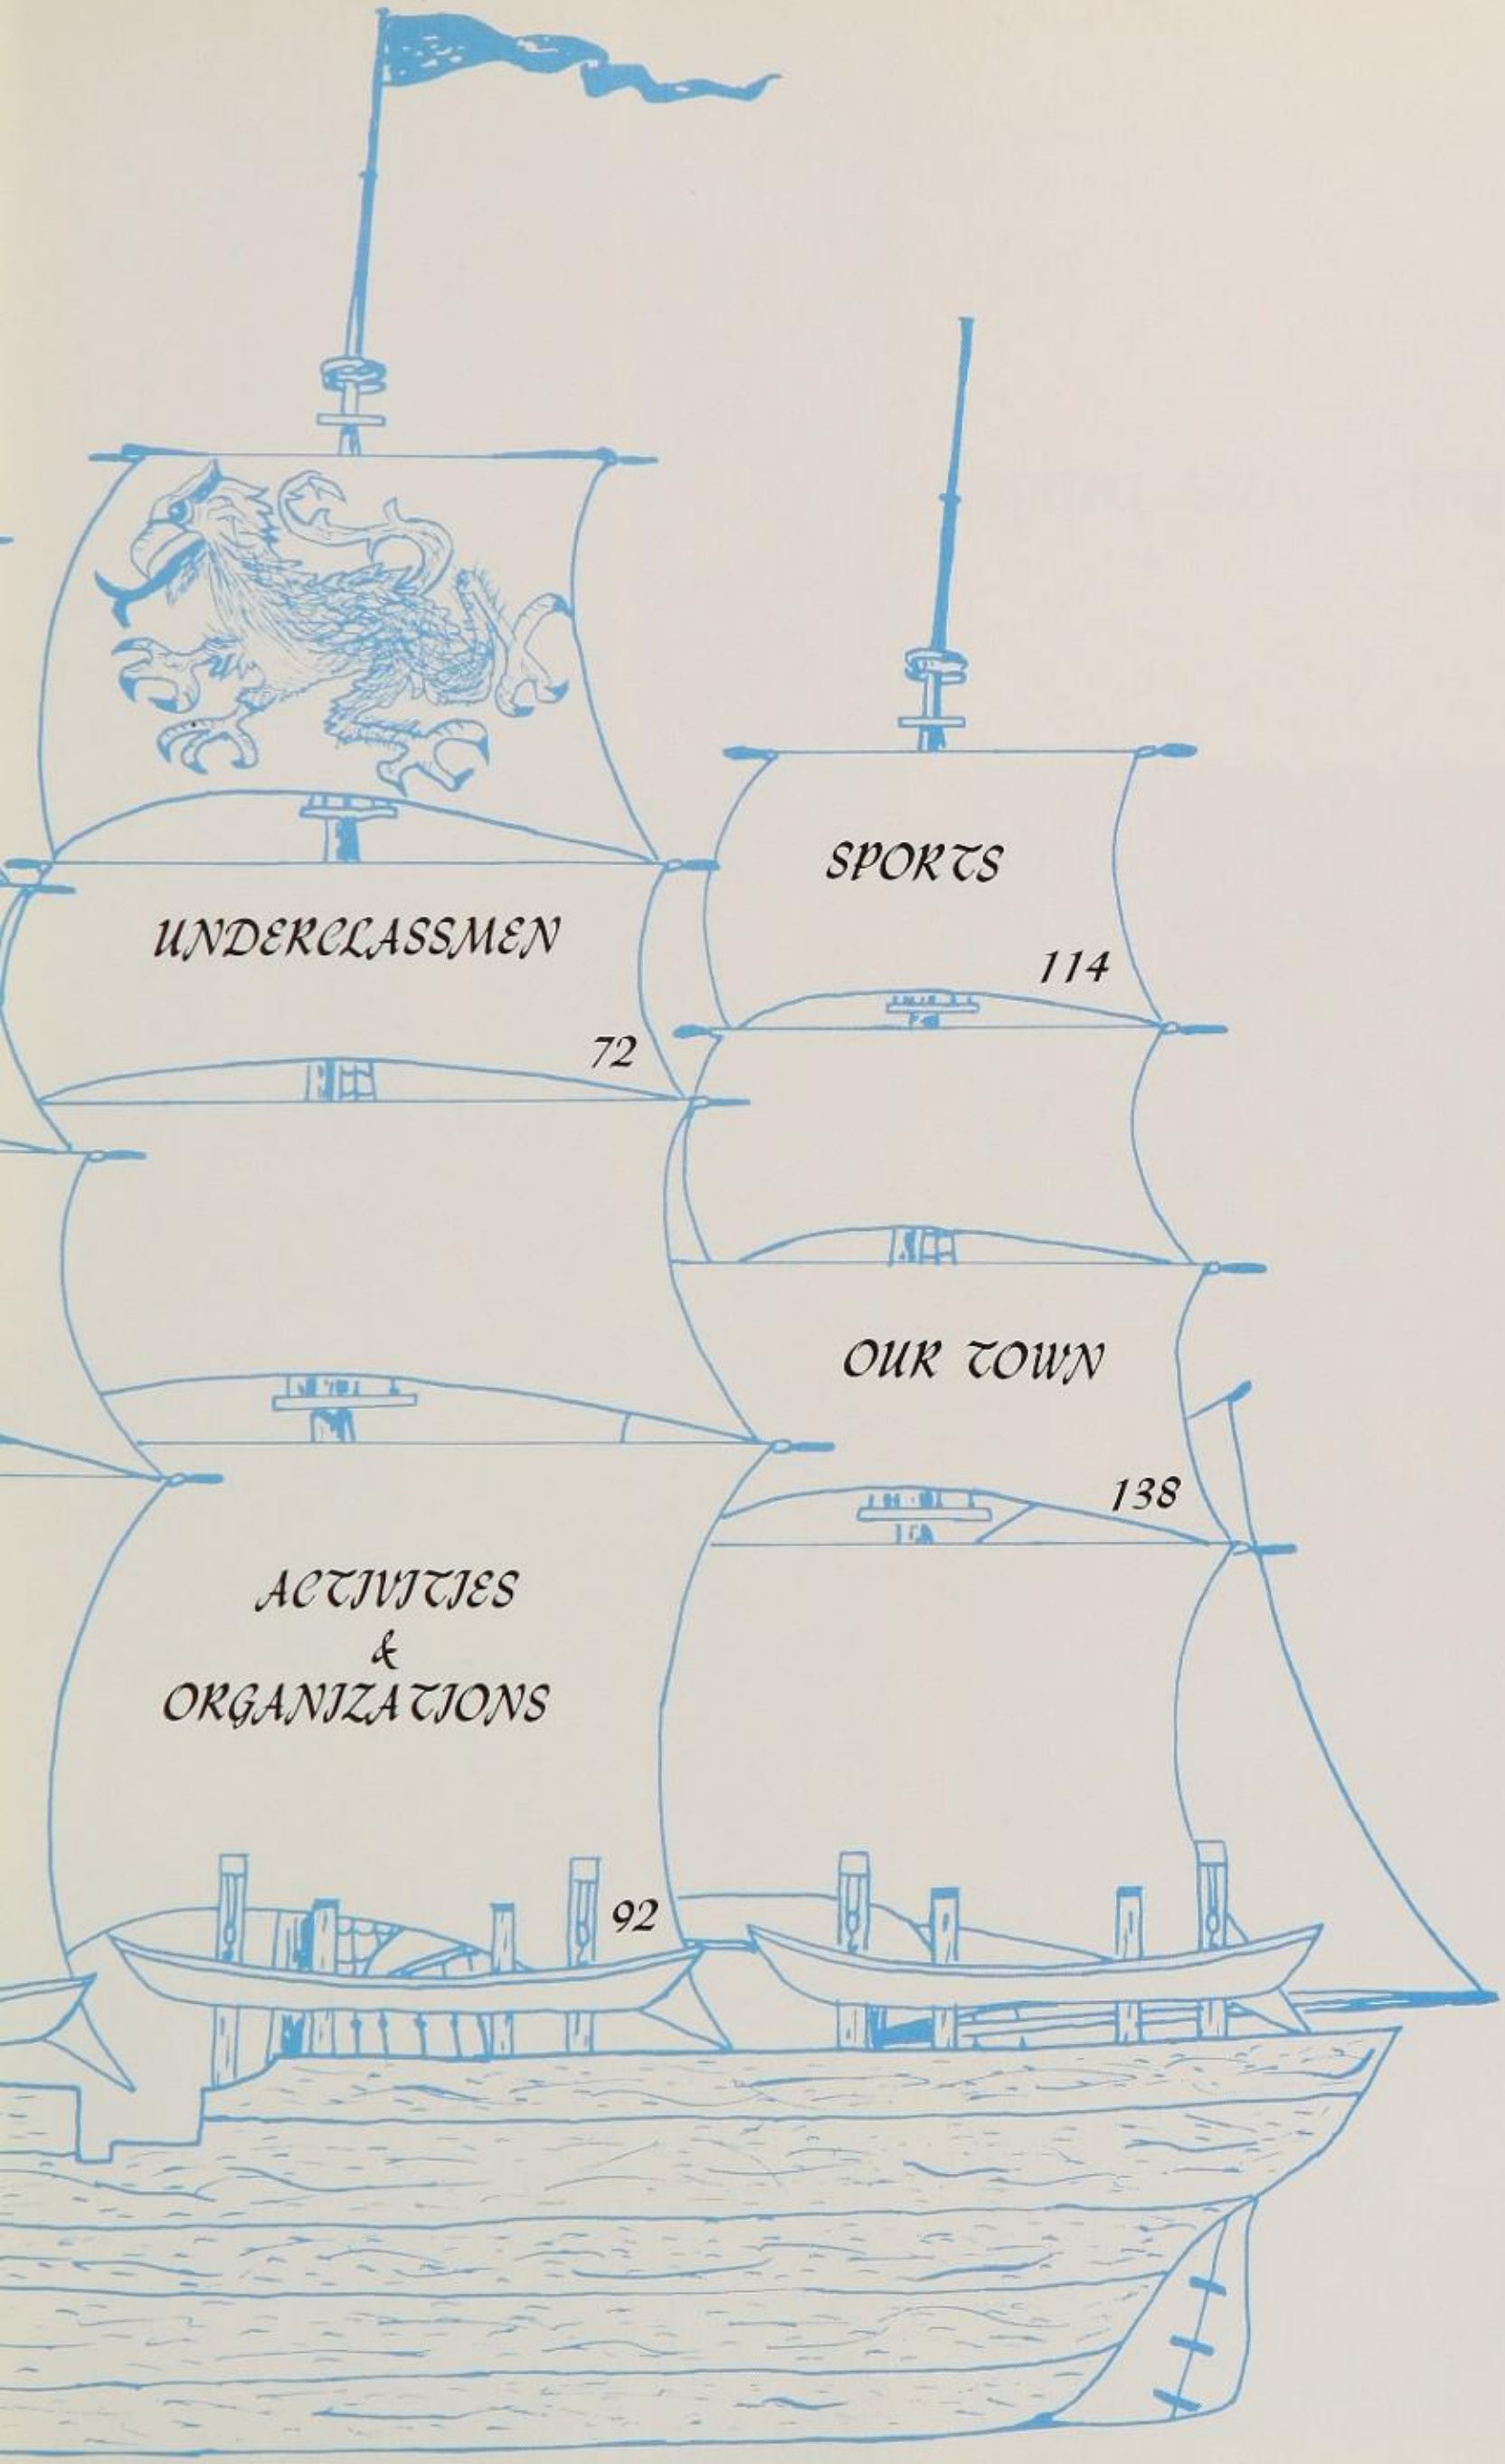
Mirroring this river heritage,
it follows that . . .

. . . Ours is a shipshape school





NELSON
CHRISTIANSEN 5

Passengers give purpose . . .

Students are the passengers.

For us, school is a training cruise,

A pleasure cruise,

A journey of search and discovery.

Officers, navigators set the course . . .

The administrators are the officers who run the school.

The teachers are our navigators toward wisdom, knowledge, and maturity.

A crew keeps 'er trim . . .

No ship would run well

if she were dirty or needed repair, and that includes ours.

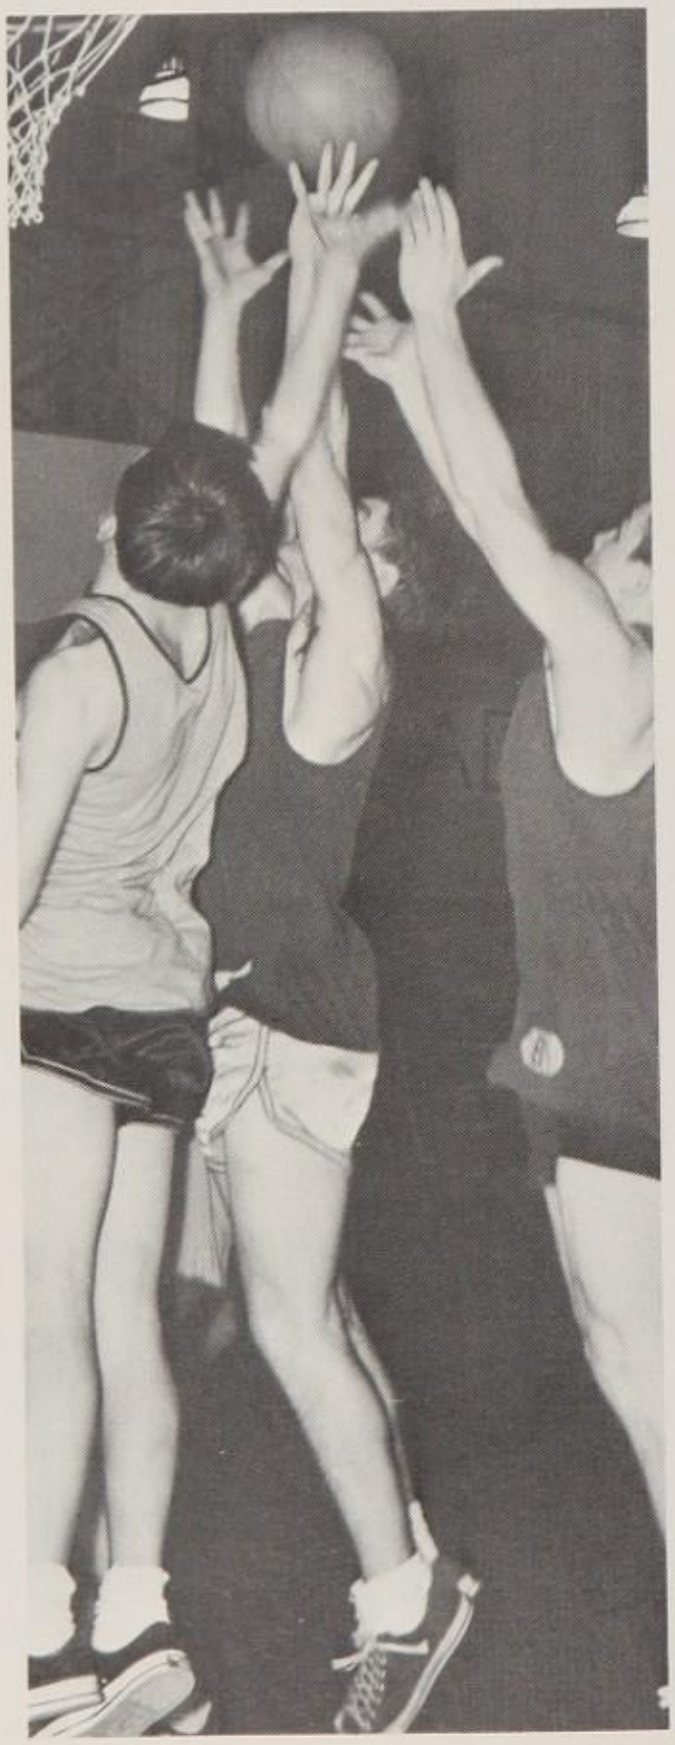
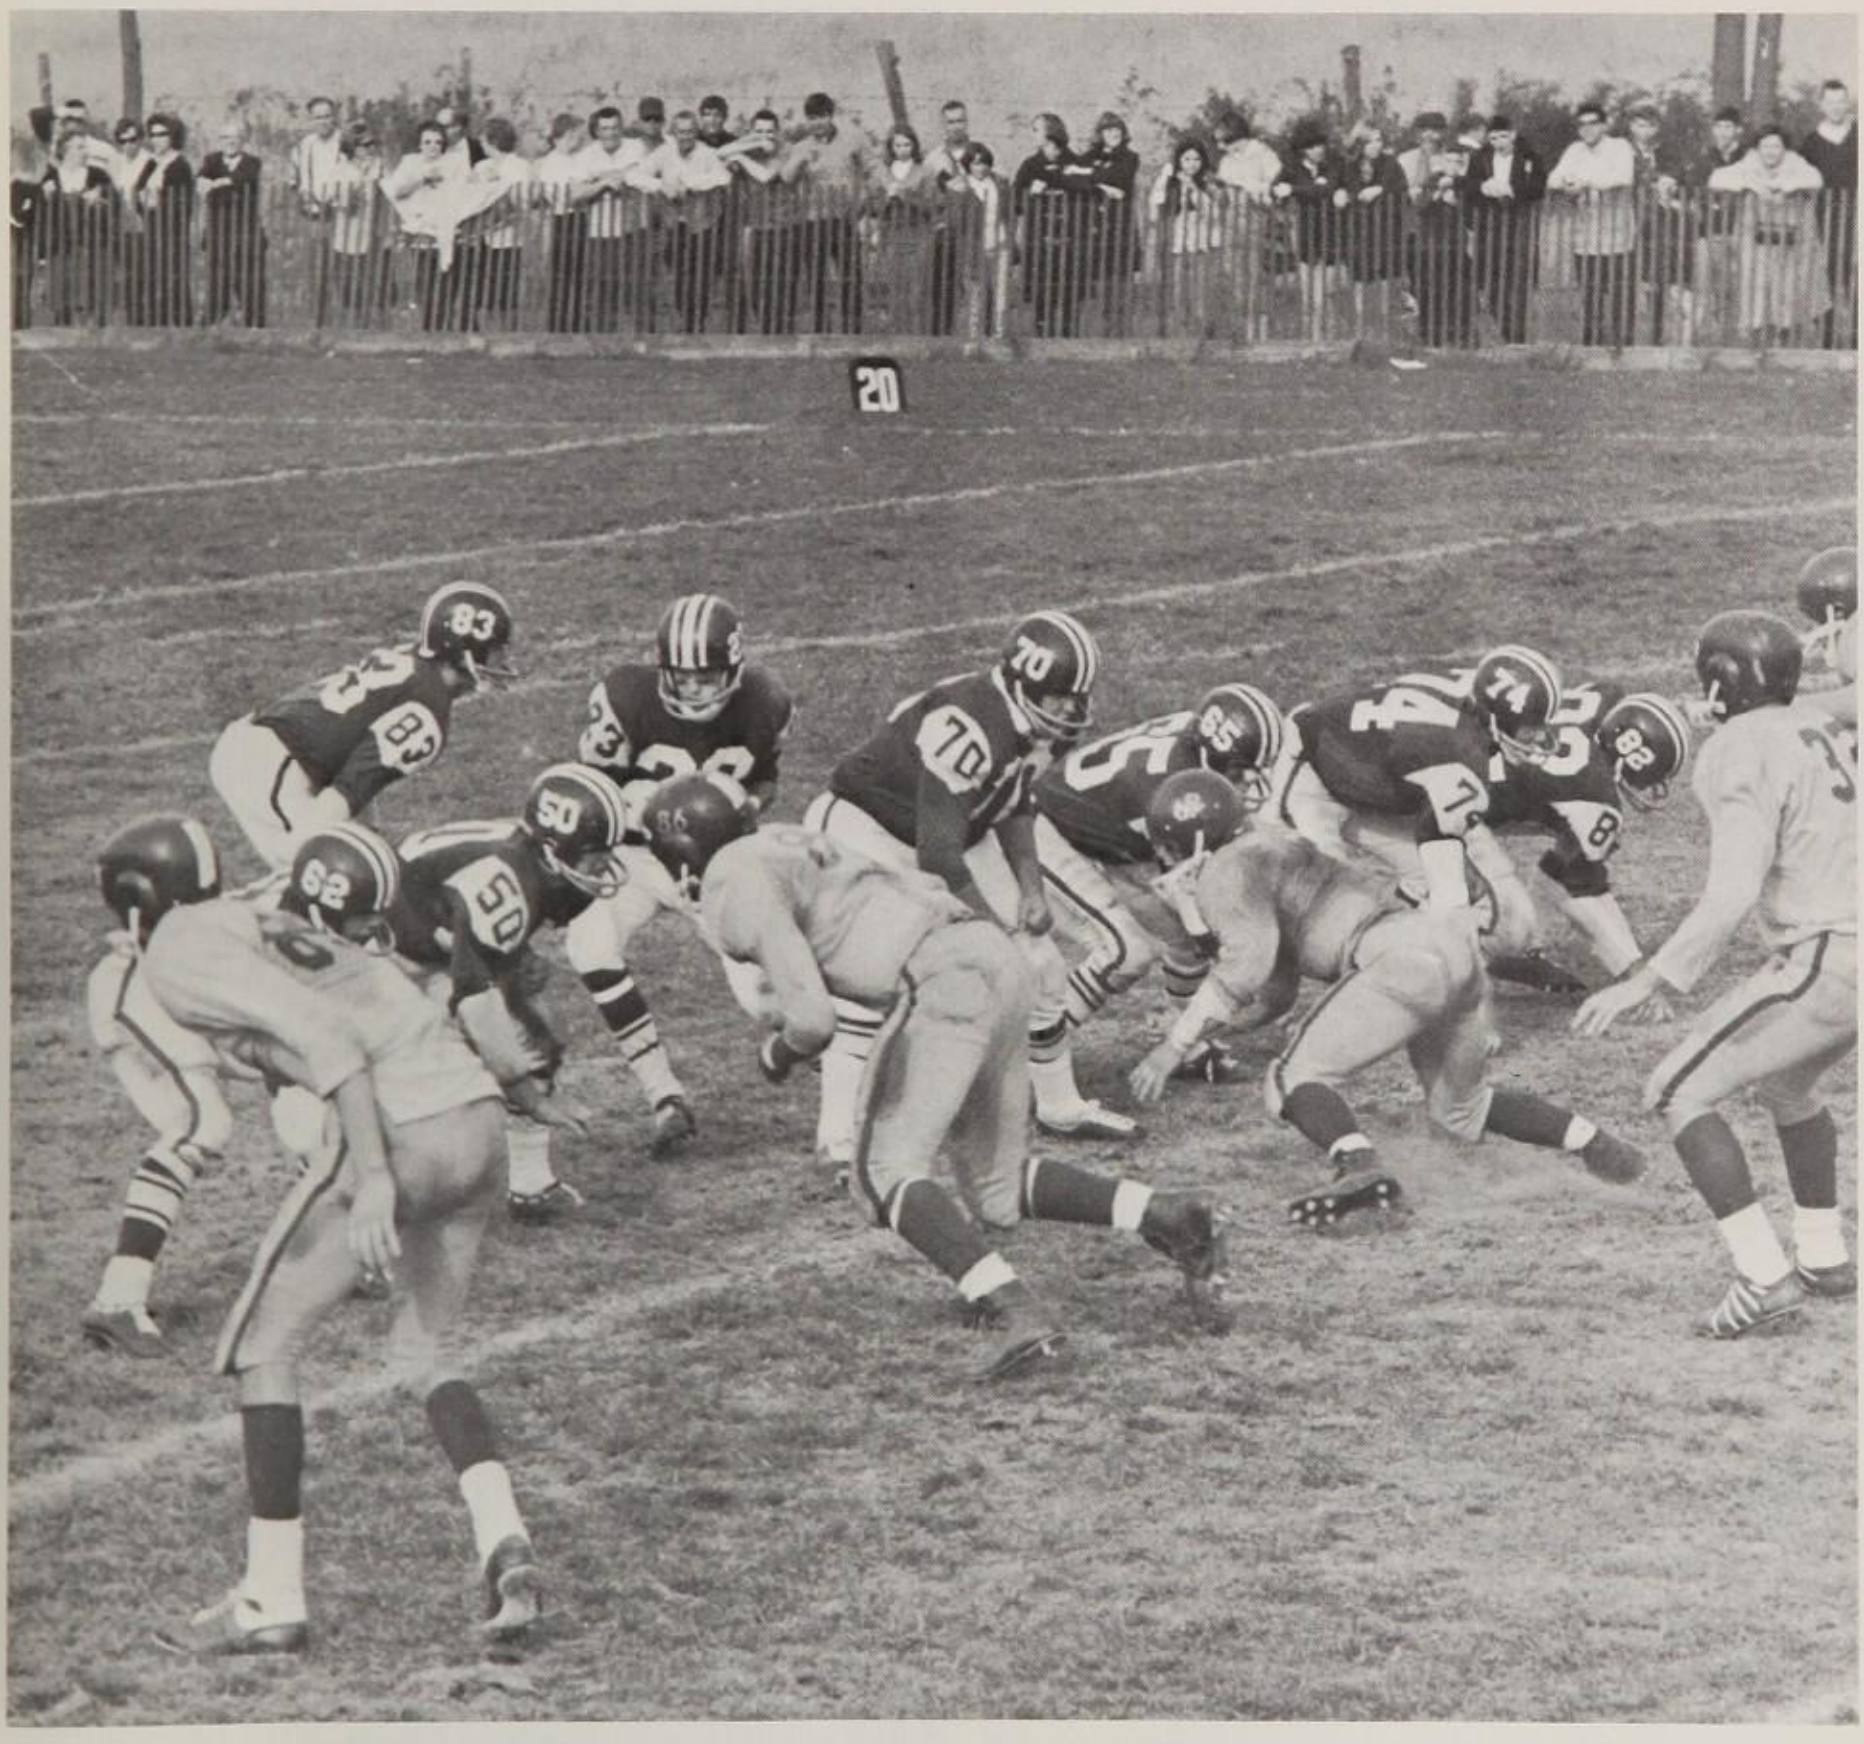
It is the crew

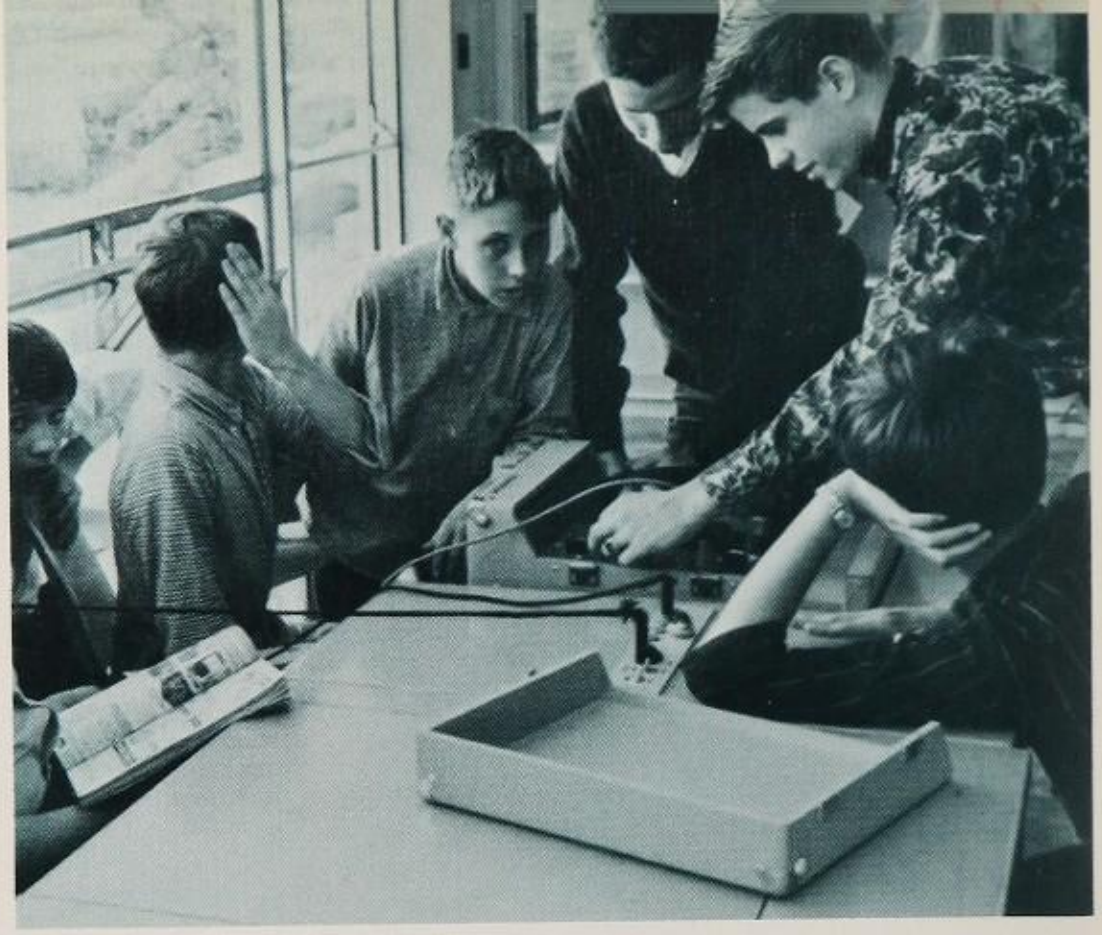
who keeps our school shipshape

and sailing smoothly.

Sudden squalls add excitement . . .







Wind fills the sails . . .

Activities are a refreshing breeze

on our journey.

Because of them, we are better able to continue on our voyage, cheered and with tension relieved.

Kevin,
Remember
the prom and all the fun
we had.
Work on the newspaper really hard to keep up what it has been. Best of luck
Sal

Stars point the way . . .

During our high school years
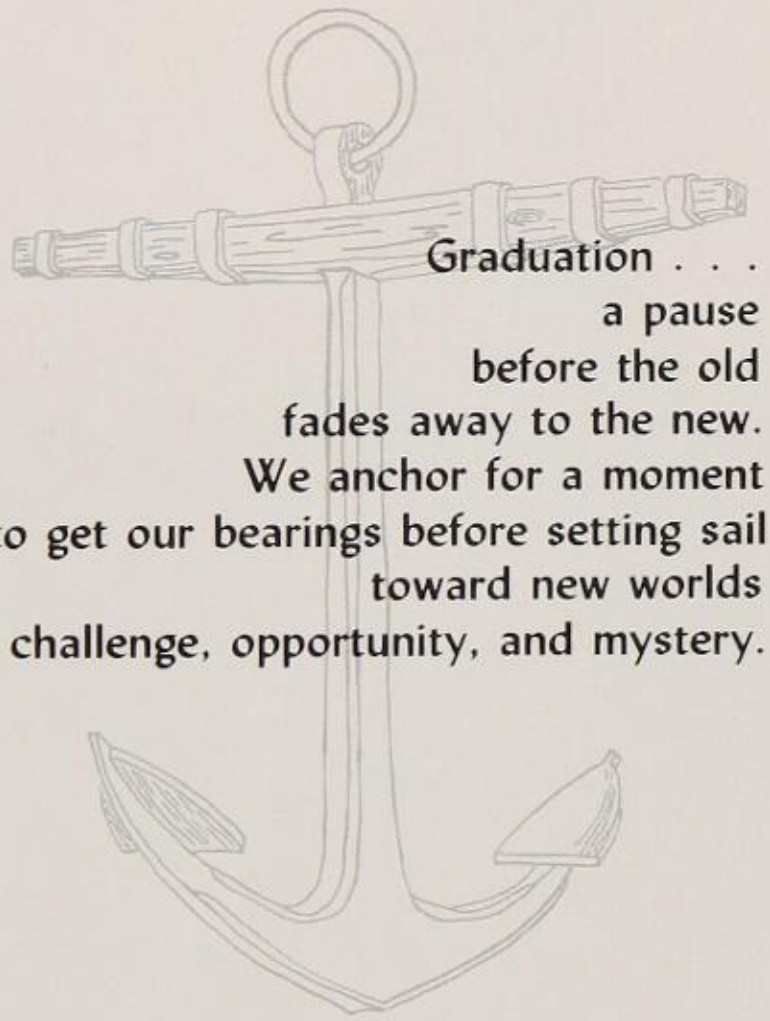
we see a few of the many aspects of life needed to maintain a healthy, balanced community.
Certain students lead the rest
and point the way
in academics, athletics, politics, leadership, and the arts.

. . . For a voyage of exploration.



Graduation . . .
a pause
before the old fades away to the new.
We anchor for a moment
to get our bearings before setting sail toward new worlds
of challenge, opportunity, and mystery.

Parents . . .

. . . make a home

. . . are there when we need them

. . . were our first teachers

. . . made us brush our teeth and wash behind our ears

. . . try to understand

. . . weather our storms

. . . love us still

. . . are security

. . . give us the car keys

. . . help us grow up

We love them.

We, the class of nineteen hundred and sixty-seven, hope in this small way to express our feeling toward our parents by dedicating this edition of The Dragon to them.

ADMINISTRATION & FACULTY

Seated: Mr. John T. Blair; Mrs. James Loeb; Mr. Robert L. Schmid, President; Mrs. John Kinsler; Miss Sarah Brooks. Standing: Mrs. Samuel Winters, Clerk; Mr. Francis Roache; Mr. Lawrence Hanretta; Mr. Robert B. Acker; Mr. John A. Shearer.

Board of Education

Sailing ships of the past were regulated and financed by a board of merchants. The members expected a large return from their investments. Our community, through the Board of Education, is the backer of the school. Good citizens and well-rounded young adults are the profits which the community seeks.

Mr. Thomas D. Shost
Supervising Principal

As a captain and his officers command the ship, so the administration directs the school. It is the supervising principal, the principal, and the dean who are responsible for the discipline and high standards of Cornwall Central High School.

A tradition . . .

That quiet humor,
the graciousness of a true lady,
the kind words
and encouraging smiles . . .
these we remember.
Though every June
her "children" go their separate ways,
each is a better person
for having known her.
This is Miss "A" 's last year at Cornwall.
The Class of '67
is very proud to have the honor of graduating with her.

Miss Mary J. Apperson

Wrestling

Cornwall matmen led C.C.H.S. to a smashing wrestling victory for the third time. Among the famous grapplers were Paul Paquin, Kenney Wojehowski, David Cleeves, Pete Rotwein, John O'Rourke and Andy Callahan. At the end of the season Callahan had a record of 34–0–1 and O'Rourke's was 32–1–2. Many laborious hours of practice under the guidance of Coach Tschan upheld the maxim that practice makes perfect. Hard work, sore muscles, and a job well done resulted in another victorious sports season for the Cornwall wrestlers, giving them a record of thirty straight wins.
